

Synopsis: Low cloudiness across the area will slowly burn-off by late morning with skies becoming partly to mostly sunny for the afternoon. A SW to W wind of 5-10 mph will hold temperatures in the 50's throughout the day. The marine layer will move back inland tonight, setting the stage for more low clouds and patchy fog for Sunday morning. Temperatures will remain on the cool side with highs remaining in the upper 50's. Stronger SW winds of 10-15 mph can be expected as well.
