Today – Sunny skies can be expected this morning before some fair weather cumulus clouds develop during the afternoon making for partly cloudy skies. Temperatures will remain warm with highs in the mid to upper 80’s. However, drier air will continue to overspread the region, making for less humid conditions as we go through the day.

Extended forecast – High pressure will dominate our weather into early next week. Mostly sunny skies can be expected each day with highs in the mid 80’s. Drier and less humid air will make it feel more comfortable as well. The chance for thunderstorms returns mid to late week with the next cold front.
