Extended forecast – Wednesday through Friday will feature dry conditions during the morning hours with the potential for showers and thunderstorms during the afternoon hours. The highest risk for thunderstorms would arrive after 2pm each day. Low-level moisture is forecast to become drier for the weekend, which should result in a lower coverage of precipitation. Winds will start out light each morning, with speeds increasing in the afternoon. Temperatures will top out in the low 70s, with overnight lows in the upper 40s to near 50F.
