Today – A mixture of sunshine and clouds will prevail today, with temperatures rising to the upper 80s by 1 PM. Clouds will increase as we heat up, and with more moisture in place compared to yesterday. Tropical moisture to our south will inch northward and interact with an increasingly unstable atmosphere to produce a few showers and storms today, mostly likely during the evening hours

Extended forecast – Another weak tropical low has developed over the northeastern Gulf of Mexico. This low and the accompanied moisture will work its way northward the next few days and affect much of the southeastern U.S. next week. Scattered to numerous showers and storms will develop from time to time, mostly likely during the afternoon and evening hours.
