Extended forecast – Temperatures will begin to cool slightly on Saturday as a cold front drops southward into the state. Thunderstorm chances will likely increase into the evening hours as the front approaches. Showers and t-storms will be likely overnight Saturday into early Sunday morning with heavy rainfall possible. Showers will linger for the first half of the day Sunday before conditions begin to dry out later in the day. Clearing skies will return by Sunday evening with a beautiful day with highs in the low 80s on Monday.
