EVENT:

ISPA HANDA Melbourne World Cup of Golf

The 2018 ISPS HANDA Melbourne World Cup of Golf will be played November 21-25, 2018 at The Metropolitan Golf Club in Melbourne, Victoria, Australia. The ISPS HANDA Melbourne World Cup of Golf is sanctioned and organized by the International Federation of PGA Tours, which includes the Asian Tour, European Tour, Japan Golf Tour, PGA TOUR, ISPS HANDA PGA Tour of Australasia and Southern Africa Tour. First played in 1953, the World Cup of Golf is one of the oldest and most prestigious global golf team events in the world inviting two-man teams from 28 nations to play "For the Honour" of representing their country.

The 2018 ISPS HANDA Melbourne World Cup of Golf will be the 59th staging of this event, which has seen many greats of the game lift the prestigious trophy. The list of champions from the World Cup reads like a who's who of golf. Great names such as Snead, Hogan, Nicklaus, Palmer, Trevino, Faldo, Ballesteros, Langer, Woods, Els and Day have all been able to call themselves World Champions.

The Metropolitan Golf Club: Hole-by-Hole

HOLE #1

Par 4, 470 Yards

The opening hole is a medium length par 4 that turns a little from right to left around two fairway bunkers on the left side of the driving area. A big bunker guards the right of the green, and when the hole is tucked close to this bunker, a drive to the left edge of the fairway is truly rewarded with a clear line to the pin.

HOLE #2

Par 3, 175 Yards

A relatively short par 3 with a green larger than it might be for a hole of this length. The championship pin placements are protected by the surrounding bunkers and the slopes that run off them into the green. This is a beautiful looking hole, and one that shouldn't provide too many early round problems. Dr. Alister MacKenzie, on his visit here in 1926, stated this was one of the best short holes he had seen in Australia.

HOLE #3

Par 4, 423 Yards

Slightly longer than the first hole, this par 4 suits a draw from the tee except when the flag is tucked in the back left corner of the green. A single greenside bunker protects the left side of the putting surface, and to get close, an approach from the right half of the fairway is essential. Over the back of this green is a terrible place to miss. Getting up and down from the deep swale isn't impossible but the chip back requires both great touch and imagination.

HOLE #4

Par 5, 521 Yards

This short par 5 has been made more difficult by a tightened driving area achieved with the addition of two fairway bunkers for the 1997 Australian Open. A new back tee, however, adds 33 yards to the hole. While this should only require a drive and a long iron, the perched-up green isn't to be missed long or right.

HOLE #5

Par 4, 413 Yards

Another hole made more difficult by the addition of a new championship tee. Two deep fairway bunkers are right in play down the left side of the driving area; the right fairway bunker is of little concern. The green features a huge slope off the shoulder of the right greenside bunker, and if the flag is in the right half of the green, an approach from the left half of the fairway – usually with a short or mid iron – is ideal. Widely regarded as one of the classic holes on the course.

HOLE #6

Par 3, 177 Yards

The sixth hole is a much-admired par 3 amongst the members, who play it as the 19th hole. The design brief was to create a hole of similar look and feel as the rest of the layout, rather than simply creating an 'extra hole'. Players are faced with a challenging uphill tee shot to a green that is one of the most undulating on the course. Hitting this green off the tee provides no guarantee of making par.

HOLE #7

Par 5, 514 Yards

The seventh is the second of three front nine par 5s and players must drive to the far-left side of the dogleg to gain the best possible angle to approach the green. Jack Nicklaus famously carried the fairway bunker that stretches across the left half of the fairway (295 yards) with a driver and a small ball in the 1967 Australian PGA Championship. The green and surrounds feature cavernous bunkers and a heavily contoured green. Precise shot-making is required, whether it be from a long second or short third shot.

HOLE #8

Par 3, 220 Yards

An underrated hole by those who dismiss it as being too long and flat. The green and its terrific looking surrounding bunkers are a model for anyone trying to build a difficult hole on a relatively flat piece of ground. Usually it takes a long iron or a 3 wood to reach, and if the pin is tucked close to the bunkers, only a perfect long shot will set up a birdie putt.

HOLE #9

Par 5, 521 Yards

Another two-shot par 5 for the good player, which requires caution as the hole is lined with trees all the way up both sides. It bends to the right but a drive too far right forces a long low fade around the corner trees if the player hopes to reach the green. A swale guards the front of the green and runs all the way around the right side. The most difficult pin placements are on the left side of the green and a miss into the deep left bunker makes it very difficult to get up and down.

The Metropolitan Golf Club: Hole-by-Hole

HOLE #10

Par 4, 432 Yards

The 10th is a long par 4 with a sharp dogleg right. Most play down to the corner with a long iron or a 3 wood, but if the driver comes out it has to be perfectly faded around the corner or it will run through the fairway. The second shot can vary between a 4 iron down to an 8 or 9. Though this is the most beautifully contoured and shaped green on the golf course, being on in two is no guarantee of par.

HOLE #11

Par 4, 484 Yards

This is a dogleg left that perfectly suits a long draw from the tee. Recent enhancement work by Crafter & Mogford has seen a new championship tee built, and the construction of a bunker on the inside of the dogleg, challenging the longer hitter wishing to shorten the hole by cutting off the dogleg. Playing short of the bunker will leave a long second shot into the green.

HOLE #12

Par 3, 168 Yards

A medium length par 3 where the ideal shot and club selection is entirely dictated by the pin placement. The back pin is guarded by a back left bunker that eats right into the green and catches any shot that is even marginally pulled. Like the second, it is not difficult to hit the middle of the green, but it demands a finer tee shot to get into the corners where the most difficult pin positions are placed.

HOLE #13

Par 4, 405 Yards

The 13th is a short-ish par 4 where the only place not to drive is into the left fairway bunkers. Unless it's played into an unusually strong wind, the second shot will only be with a short iron. Downhill putts are rarely made on this green so it's important to get your approach under the hole.

HOLE #14

Par 5, 597 Yards

This is the last of the four par 5 holes and one easily reachable in two by a good player. The green opens up from the left side of the fairway and the ideal drive either carries the deep left-hand fairway bunkers or just skirts past them. A big bunker guards the front right of the green. Getting up and down from here isn't particularly difficult so many attack the flag in the hope of a three, but with the knowledge that missing short in the sand is no disaster.

HOLE #15

Par 4, 467 Yards

This is probably the most difficult of Metropolitan's par 4s and again the strategy is simple and clear. A long bunker with a high lip sits on the left side of the fairway and a green that angles from the front left corner to the back right favors an approach from close to the fairway bunker. A greenside bunker closes off the flag for those approaching from the right and only a big high fade will get the job done for those who fly their drives too far to the right.

HOLE #16

Par 4, 377 Yards

This short par 4 doglegs sharply right around several deep fairway bunkers that have proved pivotal in deciding at least two Australian Opens. Bob Shearer in 1979 and Ian Baker-Finch in 1986 both drove into the bunkers and made bogeys that cost them their chance in those tournaments. Some can drive far enough to reach the green but it's almost impossible to keep such a long shot on the small sloping green. Often the pin placement dictates the best place to play to from the tee. The most difficult pin to get close to is behind the front right bunker; when the flag is there it's often easier to approach from 70 yards than it is from 30. A wonderful example of how great a well-designed short par 4 can be.

HOLE #17

Par 4, 430 Yards

A single deep bunker that is almost impossible to reach the green from sits on the left side of the driving area. This is the one place not to go. Some curiously situated trees (but favorites of the members) 65 yards short of the green make for a blind second for those who have driven to the right, although that is the only role they have in the play of the hole. The green is relatively large and not very difficult to hit. Only when the pin is tucked close to the bunkers does it have much influence on the approach.

HOLE #18

Par 4, 475 Yards

The championship tee added for the 1997 Australian Open stretched this hole out to 475 yard. Hitting into a wind from the north makes this a brutally difficult hole. The hole is actually dead straight, and it is only the blocked drive that is caught by the fairway bunkers down the right. However, when the flag is on the left of the green, it's clearly best to approach from close to the right bunkers. In the 1979 Australian Open, Greg Norman hit two terrific shots, the second with a 5 iron, just under the tier of the two-level green, and then three-putted to lose by one to Jack Newton. 18 years later in 1997, from almost exactly the same spot, Norman three-putted in the playoff with Lee Westwood to lose the Australian Open again.
