Today – A warm front is producing scattered showers and isolated t-storms early this morning across Central NJ. This activity will be moving to the ENE and may produce showers around Bethpage between 8-10AM. The warm front will push north of the area allowing partly cloudy skies and breezy conditions to occur through the afternoon. Additional thunderstorms will be possible later tonight.

Monday's forecast – Warmer and more humid conditions can be expected Monday as a cold front approaches from the west. Temperatures will likely top out in the mid 70s before the scattered showers and thunderstorms arrive during the afternoon into the evening hours as the front moves through the area.
