Today – The potential for daytime heating showers/T-storm are once again the forecast. Activity should initially focus to our south and north early this afternoon and then slowly drift towards the Springfield area after 3-4pm. Temperatures will climb into the lower 90s this afternoon with a light south to southeast wind in place. Sunrise: 6:11am / Sunset: 8:27pm

Extended Forecast – The threat for an isolated pop up shower/T-storm remains in the forecast on Friday, otherwise upper level ridging will build over the region for this weekend. This likely brings dry and hot weather for Saturday and Sunday. A cold front arrives late Monday with increasing shower/T-storm chances. Temperatures each day should reach the lower 90s with a light southerly wind.
