Extended Forecast – Mostly sunny skies and warmer conditions expected on Saturday with temperatures climbing into the 90s. A strong front will work into the area on Sunday, however confidence in the timing of the frontal passage remains low. The timing of the front will have a significant impact on wind direction and speed Sunday afternoon. Southwest wind gusts of 20-30 mph are possible much of the day, however they could shift to the northwest and diminish during the afternoon. A quicker moving front would also bring increased rain chances. While instability is marginal, lightning can't be ruled out.
