Today – There is an isolated (10-20%) risk for a pop-up shower or thunderstorm this morning prior to the arrival of a cold front set to pass overhead between 11am-12pm. Widely scattered showers and an isolated embedded thunderstorm may accompany the cold frontal passage, but the highest precipitation chances will occur behind the boundary between 3-6pm. Between 11am-12pm winds will shift from the east-southeast to the north-northeast and become blustery behind the cold front, gusting between 30-35 mph after 1pm. Forecast rainfall: 0.10 – 0.20" through 7pm
