Extended Forecast – A weak front will approach the Pacific NW late tonight into Saturday morning. This will allow the marine layer to surge inland late tonight and remain in place through tomorrow morning. A period of drizzle also can't be rule out. Skies should become mostly sunny Saturday afternoon with a high near 80 degrees. Low-level flow becomes northerly on Sunday which will allow for warmer temperatures and stronger winds. Temperatures should reach the middle 80s with gusts approaching 20 mph during the afternoon.
