Today – Strong winds will continue today with sustained winds from 20-30mph and peak wind gusts near 40mph. An upper level disturbance will enhance shower activity across the islands today and will also lead to a slight chance of thunderstorms (although thunderstorm chances are relatively low). Total rainfall today is forecast around a quarter inch.

Extended forecast – Winds will ease a bit on Saturday, but it will still be a breezy day with winds at 15-25mph. Saturday looks to be the wettest day of the week with numerous showers and a few embedded thunderstorms possible. We ease back into a more normal trade wind pattern on Sunday with lighter winds and scattered showers.
