Extended forecast – The slight chance for showers will end before daybreak Friday morning as the cold front moves to the east. The gusty winds will quickly decrease allowing for light winds for the rest of the day. High pressure will build over the Southwest and provide a warming trend this weekend. Highs Saturday should reach the low 70s with mid to upper 70s likely on Sunday. High clouds will likely stream over the region filtering the sun at times this weekend as well.
