Extended forecast – High pressure will continue to provide sunny skies above normal temperatures this weekend with highs warming into the mid to upper 70s each day. Light winds can be expected but may begin to increase out of the southwest Sunday afternoon 10-15 mph. Otherwise, the next piece of upper level energy and associated cold front will move across the state on Monday bringing a chance for showers and much cooler temperatures with highs in the upper 50s. Cold conditions continue Tuesday with lows in the 30s and highs in the 50s.
