Extended Forecast – The cold front will move through Huntsville this evening, with precipitation likely coming to an end by midnight. Slightly cooler conditions will return for Friday with a mix of clouds and sun. Northerly winds could gust up to 20 mph. Dry and pleasant conditions are expected on Saturday with generally light winds and mild temperatures. The forecast for Sunday remains muddled with a slow-moving upper-level disturbance potential lifting towards the area. Rain chances have been introduced for Sunday afternoon and these chances may need to be raised once confidence increases.
