Extended Forecast – A cold front will begin to approach the area late tonight into tomorrow with two potential rounds of showers/T-storms possible. The 1st round of precipitation favors late Saturday morning through much of Saturday afternoon. The heaviest precipitation with this round could stay north of Evansville. The 2nd round of activity will develop along the cold front Saturday night, and this will bring the highest rain chances to the Evansville area. Some rain shower activity could linger into Sunday morning, otherwise drier conditions should filter into the region as the day progresses.
