Extended Forecast – A warm and humid pattern will be in place Friday-Sunday as upper-level ridging remains situated over the central U.S.. Friday and Saturday likely remain dry with just a 10% chance for a pop-up shower/T-storm during the afternoon. A higher threat for precipitation may develop on Sunday as a weak front pushes towards the area. Rain chances were capped at 20% due to uncertainty revolving around shower/T-storm coverage. High temperatures each day will be in the lower 90s with southwest winds remaining under 15 mph.
