Today – Any areas of patchy fog should burn off by 8am with partly cloudy skies the rest of the day. While there is a very slight chance for a pop-up shower/T-storm this afternoon, direct impacts to the course are unlikely. It will be warm and humid with temperatures making a run at 90 degrees this afternoon. Light southerly winds can be expected. Sunrise: 5:58am / Sunset: 8:27pm

Extended Forecast – Limited weather concerns tonight with partly cloudy skies and temperatures dropping into the upper 60s. With a warm and humid airmass in place, there will be a threat for the showers/T-storms Sunday and Monday afternoon. Upper-level forcing will be limited so if any development occurs its likely remains isolated to widely scattered. Temperatures should reach the upper 80s both days.
