Extended forecast – Dry air in place will likely keep the coverage of any passing showers rather sparse for much of Friday. Moisture is forecast to return late Friday afternoon/Friday evening and will bring the potential for scattered showers overnight into Saturday morning. Saturday afternoon may additionally see a passing shower or two. Expect a similar forecast for Saturday night through Sunday, with scattered passing showers possible overnight into Sunday morning before the turning drier for Sunday afternoon. The fast-moving nature of these passing showers will limit rainfall accumulations through the weekend. Breezy east-northeasterly winds are expected to become windy after 8-10am each day of the tournament, becoming sustained between 16-23 mph with common gusts in the 24-28 mph range and a few higher peak gusts approaching 30 mph. The temperature will reach a high in the low 80s Friday through the weekend.
