Today – Warm and humid conditions will be in place today as temperatures make a run for 90 degrees. Light northwest winds during the morning should eventually shift to the southeast as a lake breeze develops. The lake breeze boundary may also serve as the focal point for isolated shower/T-storm development. However, model guidance shows little to no development so rain/lightning chances will be capped at 10% and dry conditions favored during the afternoon. Sunrise: 6:00am / Sunset: 9:12pm

Tomorrow – A very warm and humid day expected on Monday as the pressure gradient strengthens significantly ahead of an approaching front. Southwest winds will quickly increase with gusts of 20-30 mph becoming common by the afternoon. Temperatures likely reach the lower to middle 90s with dry conditions expected. Sunrise: 6:01am / Sunset: 9:12pm
