Today – Cooler and drier air is starting to filter across the region, however there remains just enough moisture and instability for shower/T-storm development. If showers/T-storms manage to develop it would most likely occur between 11am-3pm. After 3pm, dry conditions are favored although an isolated shower can't be ruled out. Temperatures should top out near 80 degrees this afternoon with an increasing northerly wind as the day progresses. Sunrise: 5:59am / Sunset: 9:13pm

Extended Forecast – An area of low pressure will shift eastward tonight into Friday with the main consequence an increase pressure gradient. This will cause breezy north winds during the day Friday with gusts of 20-25 mph possible. Strongest gusts are expected in the morning. An isolated shower also can't be ruled out, however dry conditions are favored. High pressure is expected to settle over the region for the weekend, bringing much needed dry conditions to the area. Winds under 15 mph are expected Saturday/Sunday with temperatures in the lower 80s on Saturday and upper 80s on Sunday.
