Extended forecast – A dry cold front will move through Jackson Thursday with no precipitation. It will be another warm day with highs in the upper 70s. Another shot of cooler and drier air will overspread the region Friday into Saturday. This will likely drop the temperatures into the upper 40s to low 50s each morning with highs around 70 degrees. Another weak cold front will move through the area Sunday. This may produce isolated showers during the afternoon if the precipitation can hold together long enough before dissipating.
