Today – Outside a slim threat for drizzle, expect partly cloudy to mostly sunny skies this morning. Clouds and showers are expected to build up in the West Maui Mountains this afternoon, but the vast majority of these showers are expected to remain well southeast of the course. Otherwise expect light winds throughout the day, starting out variable then becoming north-northeasterly in the afternoon.

Extended forecast – Isolated passing showers will be possible overnight into Saturday morning. Expect slow-moving showers to once again develop over the West Maui Mountains on Saturday afternoon, but with an upper-level disturbance passing nearby expect the areal coverage of these mountain showers to increase relative to Friday. Additionally, this upper feature may allow for some of these showers may become enhanced/heavier. Sunday will see relatively lighter trade winds return, along with the potential for a few passing showers that will mainly occur overnight Saturday through 9-10am Sunday before becoming isolated for Sunday afternoon.
