Extended Forecast – High pressure will provide partly cloudy skies and humid conditions Friday with highs in the mid 80s as a cold front moves into Northern Florida. The front is expected to weaken and stall across Central Florida on Saturday before moving back to the north on Sunday. This will keep the west coast of Florida mainly dry with only a slight chance for a shower or thunderstorm developing. The higher chances for seeing a showers or thunderstorms will be across interior sections as the sea breeze moves inland.
