Extended Forecast – Increasingly hot conditions will build over Alberta Friday through Sunday with temperatures climbing into the upper 80s to near 90 degrees (Lower 30s Celsius). These temperatures will be close to record values each day. Southwest winds are expected to increase on Sunday as the next system approaches the area. Wind gusts around 20 mph (30 kmh) are possible. Also, shifting upper-level winds likely pushes smoke from the British Columbia wildfires into the area this weekend. A strong cold front will pass through Calgary on Monday with brisk northerly winds and much cooler temperatures. Periods of rain showers should also develop especially Monday afternoon/night.
