On carding a bogey-free 10-under 61 Thursday

Everything was working for me today. Drove it really well. I got some putts to go in. Got a long one on 17 to go in, which was really nice. I just felt really comfortable the entire day and it was nice to shoot a low one today.

On the course conditions providing opportunity for low scores

The greens are the right firmness. You can spin one back if you want and bounce one up if you need. The rough isn't too bad. The golf course is fairly short, so if you can run some putts in, you can definitely shoot a low one.

On the Korn Ferry Tour season nearing the end and the chase for The 25

The top-25 is definitely the goal. A win is definitely going to take care of that. Hopefully I can get it done and if not this week, then I still have three more tournaments and then the playoffs. Just take it one day at a time.
