Extended Forecast – A disturbance moves in from the northwest on Friday and brings scattered showers and isolated thunderstorms to the area. Greatest chances for any rain are from mid-morning through the mid-afternoon hours. The potential for any thunderstorms will be lower on Saturday but, with the building heat and humidity, a few pop up storms remain possible. Rain and thunderstorms become more likely on Sunday as a low pressure system slowly meanders across central Illinois. Light winds continue into Friday but then pick up to 10-15 mph at times out of the southwest for the weekend.
