Extended forecast – A low pressure system moving up along the Mid-Atlantic coastline will bring an isolated passing shower or two Saturday morning. A few showers may develop in the afternoon, along with an isolated thunderstorm threat after 2pm. A few morning showers on Sunday will increase to a scattered coverage by the early afternoon. A few embedded weak thunderstorms are additionally possible after 1-2pm Sunday. Rain and thunderstorms become more widespread Sunday night into Monday. Forecast confidence is medium for Sunday as there is uncertainty in the timing of a storm system approaching from the west.
