Today – Areas of fog that roll in and off the course are forecast to lift between 8-9am. Mostly cloudy skies are forecast throughout the day, with isolated pop-up showers or thunderstorms becoming possible in the early afternoon. A few additional showers and storms will flare up during the late afternoon and evening hours, but the more widespread chances for rain/storms should hold off until the overnight hours/early Monday. Muggy conditions are forecast with temperatures climbing into the mid-80s. An inconsistent southeasterly breeze in the afternoon may produce a few gusts in the 15-17 mph range after 2-3pm.
