7 AM Weather Update

Saturday, April 9, 2022

Synopsis: A cool start this morning with temperatures in the low 40s. Today will be a chilly day with temperatures struggling to warm into the upper 50's during the afternoon. Cloud cover thickens up again around midday, with another low chance for sprinkles or a light, brief shower through the afternoon. Winds will again be breezy but not as strong as Friday, becoming sustained near 15 mph and gusting 20-25 mph at times. A cold start can be expected Sunday morning with lows in the mid to upper 30's. Areas of frost will be likely, before temperatures rebound into the lower 70's for the afternoon under sunny skies and lighter winds. High pressure will build to the east on Monday providing warmer temperatures with highs around 80 degrees.
