Today – The threat for a few showers will continue this morning until the sea breeze pushes far enough inland. Also, with drier air spreading over the island today, the potential for heavy showers is low. Partly cloudy and dry conditions are favored for the afternoon with the main shower threat across interior areas. East/northeast winds at 10-15 mph can be expected much of the day with gusts exceeding 20 mph at times. Forecast rainfall: Less than 0.10". Sunrise: 6:40am / Sunset: 6:30pm

Extended forecast – Lobes of deeper moisture will spread across the island from time to time this weekend bringing periodic waves of showers. Based on latest model guidance, conditions for shower development is most favorable between midnight and 8am Saturday and then again after 4pm Saturday. An upper-level disturbance will influence the weather Sunday/Monday with increasing rain chances. Right now, Sunday night into Monday are favored for the most organized and widespread shower activity but confidence is low.
