Today – The heavy rain overnight did not materialize, however periods of showers will remain possible throughout the day as an upper-level disturbance drifts over the region. Heavy downpours could occur in any shower and lightning can't be ruled out, although the greatest risk for impactful weather will be across interior portions of the island. Strong east/northeast winds can be expected all day with gusts over 25 mph. Forecast rainfall: Less than 0.25" with locally higher amounts possible. Sunrise: 6:38am / Sunset: 6:30pm

Tomorrow – Periods of showers will remain possible on Monday, especially during the morning hours. Pockets of heavier rain could occur. The upper-level disturbance will begin to move away from island Monday afternoon with drier air and lowering rain chances. East/northeast winds will remain brisk with gusts around 25 mph much of the day. Forecast rainfall: 0.25-0.50" with locally higher amounts possible. Sunrise: 6:37am / Sunset: 6:30pm
