Monday – A HIGH WIND WARNING is in effect from Monday afternoon into Tuesday morning. An extremely strong cold front is forecast to arrive in Las Vegas late Monday afternoon. Estimated arrival time of the cold front is between 4pm-6pm. Winds will shift to the northwest and dramatically increase behind the front with peak gusts possibly exceeding 50mph. A rare weather phenomenon known as a HABOOB may develop along the leading edge of the cold front which is a wall of dust that can briefly encompass the city. Winds will remain strong and damaging through the overnight hours Monday night and will begin to subside Tuesday morning. Temperatures will fall into the 40s by Tuesday morning.
