Today – High clouds will stream across Las Vegas this morning; however dry conditions will remain in place. As the clouds clear this afternoon, winds will begin to increase out of the south/southwest, and they could strengthen rather abruptly. Wind gusts of 15-20 mph appear likely after 3-4pm and could be approaching 25 mph by 5-6pm. Overall confidence in gusts over 20 mph during play is low.

Tomorrow – A cold front will move through Nevada on Monday, bringing a period of gusty winds to Las Vegas, especially during the morning. Southwest winds, gusting 30-40 mph, will be possible before 12pm. Winds should then diminish quickly during the afternoon hours as they become more westerly. Temperatures will be cooler with highs only in the upper 60s to near 70F.
