Today – Partly cloudy skies and hot temperatures will continue today with highs in the low 90s. A light southwesterly breeze will push more humid air northward over the area through the day. This will provide enough instability to produce a few showers and thunderstorms as we approach the evening hours.

Extended forecast – Warm and muggy conditions will continue Friday into the weekend as North Carolina is sandwiched between high pressure over the Central U.S. and a Bermuda high off the east coast. Highs in the upper 80s to low 90s can be expected with partly cloudy skies. There will be the chance for scattered showers and thunderstorms each afternoon into the evening hours, especially to the west across the mountains. Storms will be slow moving and will likely produce heavy rainfall in a short period of time.
