

THURSDAY, June 23rd, 2022 – 5 PM WEATHER FORECAST

With all the activity that we missed out on compared to locations to our east and west it seems only fitting that light rain and clouds would linger over the course this afternoon longer than anywhere else. The showers on the back end of the band lasting roughly an hour this afternoon dropped an additional 0.05” bringing our total for the day just over half an inch over the past seven hours today. Thinning clouds through the evening hours will do its best to warm our temps into the upper 60s as we approach sunset. Thursday night clearing skies will allow temps to fall back down into the upper 50s and when combined with light winds and moisture from today’s rain, is expected to produce patchy fog across the region starting to form early Friday morning before lots of sunshine looks to burn it off between 7 - 8 AM. Winds will shift all the way over to the northwest Friday staying relatively light with speeds averaging 5 mph gusting near 9 mph through the evening with temperatures warming back to near normal for this time of year with highs then in the low 80s then falling back into the low as we start the morning on in the mid 60s.
