Grayson Murray survives 72nd hole stumble, wins AdventHealth Championship for second career Korn Ferry Tour victory

KANSAS CITY, Missouri – Grayson Murray, a previous winner on both the PGA TOUR and Korn Ferry Tour, won the 2023 AdventHealth Championship by a stroke over Wilson Furr and Rico Hoey, despite a double bogey on the 72nd hole after a wayward tee shot. Murray earned his first win in PGA TOUR-sanctioned play since the 2017 Barbasol Championship on TOUR, as well as his first Korn Ferry Tour win since the 2016 Nationwide Children’s Hospital Championship.

“It hasn’t really sunk in,” Murray said. “Six years is a long drought, far longer than I wanted. Sometimes your highs are high out here and your lows are low. It’s a very humbling sport. I’ve been working really hard, and this is a testament to the hard work.

“My parents have been through hell and back basically for the last six years with me fighting some mental stuff,” Murray continued. “It’s not easy on me, and the people around me that love me, they don’t like to see me down. They’ve been my No. 1 supporters. There’s a few friends as well that have been there, and it makes these moments a lot more special when you can share it with them.”

Murray’s comeback victory began Saturday evening, when he birdied his final four holes and moved within two strokes of Furr, the outright 54-hole leader. Murray closed with a 4-under 68 Sunday, and the double bogey on par-5 18th was just his second score of bogey or worse all week, with his only other blemish coming at the par-4 seventh in his second round.

Even with an opening birdie in the final round, Murray trailed Furr by three strokes through six holes. Murray birdied the seventh and moved within two, Furr's bogey at the par-3 eighth halved the deficit, and another birdie for Murray at the par-4 10th pulled him even with Furr at 18-under par.

The two remained tied until the par-5 13th, where Murray made his second eagle of the tournament and took a one-stroke lead over Furr. Murray's birdie at the par-4 16th coupled with Furr's bogey at the par-4 17 gave him a three-stroke lead as he walked to the 72nd tee.

"It was really the worst shot... definitely the worst shot of the week," Murray said of his tee shot at the 18th. "I pulled it and hit a tree and it ended up out of bounds. It's never easy to win."

Murray drained an 8-footer for a one-stroke win at 19-under 269, tying Cameron Young (2021) for the lowest 72-hole score in the four playings of the AdventHealth Championship since its relocation to Blue Hills Country Club in 2019.

"I'm rededicating myself in the gym and doing a lot of mental stuff to really ease my mind out here. I felt so calm this week," Murray said. "It was probably the calmest I felt on the golf course in a long time. I struggle with anxiety, and that's a very tough thing to do when you're playing golf is to go through anxiety. It's never going to be a walk in the park and every day's a new challenge."

Murray, who has split time between the Korn Ferry Tour and PGA TOUR the last two seasons after consecutive finishes at No. 191 in the FedExCup Playoffs and Eligibility Points List, entered the week with a season-high finish of T37 in his three Korn Ferry Tour starts, and two made cuts in seven starts on the PGA TOUR (T15 at the 2023 Puerto Rico Open, and solo 33rd at the 2023 Zurich Classic of New Orleans). Sunday's win took Murray from No. 142 to No. 14 on the 2023 Korn Ferry Tour Points List.

"It's going to be interesting to see what I focus on, because I think maybe my best chance would be to just stay out here and play on this tour since there's 30 cards given this year instead of 25," said Murray, who previously earned PGA TOUR cards via the Korn Ferry Tour in 2016 and 2019. "But we'll see. I'm going to enjoy this one first."

Murray turned professional in 2015 following collegiate golf stints at Wake Forest University, East Carolina University, and Arizona State University. Murray finished T74 at Final Stage of the 2015 Korn Ferry Tour Qualifying Tournament, earning conditional status for the 2016 season.

Murray earned his first start of the season via a Monday qualifier, though he missed the cut and failed to improve his status. A sponsor exemption for the UNC Health Championship presented by STITCH, the eighth event of the 2016 season, turned into a T10 for Murray; he followed it with three top-10s in his next five starts and, just under three months after his first top-10 in Raleigh, North Carolina, lost to Wesley Bryan in a playoff at the AdventHealth Championship.

Murray's win at the 2016 Nationwide Children's Hospital Championship locked up the No. 2 spot on the season-long Korn Ferry Tour standings, only leaving him behind Bryan, a three-time winner that season.

As a PGA TOUR rookie, Murray finished a career-high 66th in the 2016-17 FedExCup Standings off the strength of his win at the 2017 Barbasol Championship. Murray made the FedExCup Playoffs the following year, but did not finish higher than 186th in any of the next four seasons.

Murray made 12 PGA TOUR starts and 10 Korn Ferry Tour starts last season, with the highlight being a T4 at the 2022 AdventHealth Championship.
