Today – Low clouds will give way to a mix of clouds and sun by the late morning hours. A cold front will then approach Savannah this afternoon, however the showers/T-storms associated with this front should be in a weakening trend. Regardless, some shower and embedded T-storm activity will be possible near the golf course between 2-6pm. If a sea breeze develops, shower/T-storm activity may be enhanced. Gusty southwest winds up to 25 mph can be expected much of the day. Forecast rainfall: Less than 0.25". Sunrise: 7:21am / Sunset: 7:39pm

Extended forecast – A substantial increase in low-level moisture will bring widespread low clouds Sunday morning with some areas of drizzle possible. Otherwise, model guidance has come into much better agreement with the location of the stalled front tomorrow. The focus for showers/T-storms likely remains 50-100 miles west and north of Savannah. With that said, an afternoon sea breeze could still trigger some spotty shower/T-storm activity so a low threat (20% chance) will be left in the forecast. Southerly winds will generally remain under 15 mph during the day. Forecast rainfall: Less than 0.15". Sunrise: 7:20am / Sunset: 7:39pm
