Extended forecast – Friday, additional rounds of scattered showers/t-storms remain possible, with the highest coverage of activity in the morning. Some of these storms may be strong to severe, with damaging winds and heavy rainfall the main threats. Winds will be variable to southwesterly and generally under 15 mph. Scattered shower and t-storm chances continue for Saturday and Sunday as an area of low pressure moves over the area. Some of these storms may be locally strong with gusty winds and heavy rainfall. Winds on Saturday will be variable to west-southwest and mainly under 15 mph. A slight increase in west breezes is expected Sunday.
