Tomorrow – Breezy conditions will continue Wednesday, with southeasterly winds turning south-southeasterly in the afternoon and gusting in the 20-25 mph range. Remnants of the frontal boundary that passed through Monday evening will lift back northward Wednesday morning and is expected to generate a widely scattered coverage of fast-moving ocean showers. A briefly heavy shower may occur, but the quick nature of this activity should limit overall rainfall potential. These showers are expected to become isolated in coverage Wednesday afternoon as this pocket of moisture lifts north of Great Abaco. Temperatures will top out in the upper 70s.

Forecast rainfall: 0.10" – 0.20"
