Today – Warm and breezy conditions can be expected today with southerly winds gusting near 30 mph this afternoon. A dryline will approach the DFW metro during the mid to late afternoon hours. This will create a conditional threat for showers/T-storms after 4pm, however strong capping likely prohibits development. Otherwise, a notable uptick in cloud cover can be expected during the afternoon with a high near 81 degrees. Sunrise: 7:00am / Sunset: 7:57pm

Extended forecast – A slight threat for a shower/T-storm exists this evening, however the atmosphere likely remains capped. Otherwise, a cold front will clear the area between 12-2pm Saturday with any precipitation development favoring areas to the east. Wind gusts between 25-30 mph are expected ahead of and behind the cold front. Cooler and breezy conditions should persist into Sunday with gusts near 25 mph possible.
