Aon Insight

In 2022, the 18th hole at TPC Twin Cities played as the most difficult par 5 all season on the PGA TOUR. An enormous reason why is the difficult tee shot, which statistically is the most important on the golf course. When players make birdie or eagle here, 27 percent of their strokes gained against the field have come from the drive. That’s more than twice as significant as the rest of the par 4s and 5s here (12 percent). Missing the fairway here carries an average penalty of 0.61 strokes, the highest number on the course.

Contender Update

As we head into the final two weeks of the Aon Risk Reward Challenge season, Stephan Jaeger sits atop the leaderboard at an average score to par of -0.889. Jaeger's steady performance throughout the season, highlighted by his eagle in the first round of the Memorial tournament, has given him a 46.35% chance of taking home the trophy and $1 million prize.

The top contender, Tyrell Hatton, sits just below Jaeger with an average to par of -0.885. With only Jaeger in the field this week, he would need to play the 18th at TPC Twin Cities at 2 under par or better to maintain his lead over Hatton. Tune into CBS coverage throughout the event to follow the action over the next two weeks and see who is named this season's top decision maker.
