

Scottish Open Forecast	5 AM Update	Thursday, 13 July 2023
------------------------	-------------	------------------------

Synopsis -

Partly sunny skies begin the day with winds from the WSW at speeds of 8-12 MPH. We will see increase up to 12-18 MPH from late morning into the afternoon hours. There will be just a few isolated showers in the area during the afternoon but majority of those will remain south and east of us. Tomorrow, a warm front will approach the area from the SW giving us a good chance for showers ahead of during the morning into early afternoon hours then steadier rains likely from late afternoon and into the evening. The heaviest of the rains tomorrow will occur during the evening hours with potential for 8-16 mm for the day. Low pressure system slides west of Edinburgh on Saturday with another round of showers likely during the afternoon with embedded thunderstorms likely. Stronger winds move in for Sunday on the back side of the low pressure system with speeds of 20-30 MPH and gusts up to 35 MPH possible for most of the day.
