7 AM Weather Update

Saturday, April 8, 2023

Synopsis: Scattered showers are expected to become more numerous as we go through the morning and become a constant rain between 10am-12pm and continue for the rest of the day into tonight. Moderate rain can be expected this afternoon with some pockets being heavy at times. Temperatures are currently in the upper 40s and will remain steady for the rest of the day. A northeast wind of 14-18 gusting to 25-30 mph will make it feel colder as well. Rain persists overnight but will gradually diminish after 4AM with mist or drizzle lingering through mid-morning. Dry conditions finally return late Sunday morning, with overcast skies becoming partly cloudy during the late afternoon. Rainfall through 2pm today will average 0.40-0.60". 2PM-8PM: 0.50-0.75" and 8pm-2am: 0.25-0.50". Mostly sunny skies can be expected Monday with highs in the mid-60s.
