Today – Any patchy fog will burn-off quickly this morning. Otherwise, sunny skies will help temperatures warm to around 80 degrees by early afternoon before the sea breeze moves onshore and cools temperatures back into the mid-70s. Light wind this morning will increase out of the south-southwest by early afternoon and average 10 mph.

Sunday Forecast – Showers will be possible to start the day Sunday as a weakening area of overnight thunderstorms moves across Southern Georgia. There will likely be a lull in the precipitation before scattered showers and thunderstorm develop along the sea breeze during the afternoon. The chance for scattered showers and thunderstorms will continue into the evening hours as a cold front moves through the area.
