Today – Increased moisture levels will lead to more cloud cover this afternoon with shower/T-storm development possible over the higher terrain surrounding the Las Vegas Valley. While this activity will remain anchored to the terrain, the proximity of the course (~ 15 miles away) could lead to vicinity lightning strikes. Regardless, any impacts to the course are extremely unlikely. Light east/southeast winds will be in place with a high near 90 degrees. Sunrise: 6:41am / Sunset: 6:14pm

Tomorrow – Conditions will remain favorable for afternoon showers/T-storms over the mountains surrounding Las Vegas. While coverage will likely be more widespread compared to Sunday afternoon, the threat for rain/lightning within the Las Vegas Valley remains very low (5-10%). Otherwise, partly cloudy skies can be expected throughout the day with temperatures climbing into the upper 80s. Sunrise: 6:43am / Sunset: 6:12pm
