Today – Overcast skies in place this morning should eventually give way to some sun later this afternoon. Dry conditions are expected throughout the day with temperatures reaching the lower 70s. Southeast winds at 6-12 mph, gusting to around 15 mph will develop by mid-day.

Tomorrow – A warmer but more unstable environment will be in place on Sunday which could lead to spotty afternoon/evening T-storm development. There is also some concern that an organized complex of showers/T-storms tracks into northern Georgia by the early evening hours. Given the uncertainty, the forecast will keep shower/T-storm chances at 30% or less during the daylight hours. Temperatures should climb near 80 degrees with southwest winds gusting around 15 mph. Forecast rainfall: Less than 0.15". Sunrise: 6:41am / Sunset: 8:24pm
