Extended forecast – Generally quiet conditions Friday and Saturday, however a weak upper-level disturbance will bring increased cloud cover and perhaps a few sprinkles to the area Friday-Friday night. Otherwise, temperatures will warm as winds become more southeasterly. The next cold front will reach Florida on Sunday, however latest trends have slowed the arrival of this front. This means most of the shower/T-storm activity associated with the front wouldn't arrive until after 3pm Sunday. In fact, there is potential that showers/T-storms don't arrive until after sunset.
