Extended forecast – As the system continues to work inland towards the region tomorrow, it will begin to weaken on approach. This weakening trend will limit the overall coverage of shower activity but scattered showers are possible throughout the entirety of the day. T-storm potential will again remain minimal, but a very low chance remains through the mid-to-late afternoon hours Saturday. Conditions will slowly clear into Sunday but lingering showers are possible through the morning hours. A significant cooldown is forecast this weekend with highs tomorrow barely reaching 70F.
