Today – Conditions today will be similar to that of yesterday with mostly sunny to partly cloudy skies early this AM. Cloud cover will gradually filter into Bogota through the early PM with a low threat for an isolated shower or two much of the day. With dry air holding steady aloft, any activity will be weak and brief. East winds will develop throughout the late morning with a few gusts nearing 14-15mph at times this afternoon. PM highs will reach into the upper-60s, potentially hitting 70F (21C) by 3PM.

Monday – Partly cloudy skies are forecast to start the week on Monday with light and variable winds. A bit of added moisture may allow for coverage of shower activity to increase later in the PM hours, but atmospheric conditions will not be sufficient for any thunderstorm activity. A high near 70F (21C) is expected early in the PM alongside an E/SE wind reaching 8-10mph.
